IN DETAIL:

Her own mental health recovery is what led her to want to train as a therapist. She returned to university to achieve her master's degree in psychology at 26; for 8 years after that, Zoë specialised in addiction, eating disorders and trauma reduction, working in treatment centres such as The Priory and then on Harley Street. Zoe set out on her own with a mission to make working on your mental health as accessible and acceptable as working on your physical health. Zoë consults for businesses, including global brands and private equity companies. Having trained in and experienced a number of different therapy models, Zoë's approach is holistic and integrative.

WHAT SHE OFFERS YOU:

The combination of her personal and professional experience makes her a trustworthy spokesperson for the benefits of therapy, wellness, and mental health related. She pushes and challenges everyone to consider what it means to be looking after our minds and she does this in a way that promotes equality and balance in the individual as well as for the greater good.

HOW SHE PRESENTS:

An exceptional speaker, Zoe's speech can be personalised to the brand or topic in question and offer a highly interactive and dynamic experience. Her talks are a clear and accessible way to learn more about your own mental health.
